Josephine Bloggs is a warm, kind and caring midwife. Her high work ethics and professionalism are commendable.

She demonstrates a genuine respect for her patients to ensure that they receive fantastic care.

I have witnessed Josephine providing this care on several occasions now when my wife had our first baby at WA Hospital. My wife was admitted with high blood pressure before the baby was born. We were lucky enough to have Josephine allocated to the wards during this stay. She happened to be on shift and allocated to us for the birth of our baby in the labour ward. We then saw her a few more times when she was allocated us on the ward before we were discharged home.

Her smiling face and positive attitude made a significant difference to us, particularly when we were worried about the whole process before, during and after the baby was born.

The main thing that stuck in my mind about Josephine was how she explained how to stay calm when our baby was unsettled, and gave us so many tips and valuable information about raising our baby safely.

Her manner with us as anxious first parents, and our new baby was reassuring.

I also witnessed Josephine supporting and teaching new midwives and students who were in her care. As a consumer we could see how important she was to them as well in their time of anxiety.

My wife and I are keen to nominate Josephine for this award as a way of saying thank you from us and the other new parents she has helped get a head start.
